ROSSER RIDDLES 'ONE OF THE STATE'S CHIEF WITNESSES'

Detective John Black 'Goes to Pieces' Under Rapid-Fire Cross-Questioning of Frank's Attorney at Afternoon Session

Active characterized the Wednesday afternoon session of the Frank trial and it was the first time the tedious proceedings had been so much as attracted more than passing interest.

There was a considerable outpouring of Attorney Rosser's questions and answers to the questions framed by the solicitor during this testimony. It is expected that the judge will have to make a ruling on the admissibility of the state's principal witness, but before Mr. Rosser finished his cross-examination he was so completely confused that he was unable to answer.

Girl at Frank Trial Thought Operators Were 'Dictographs'

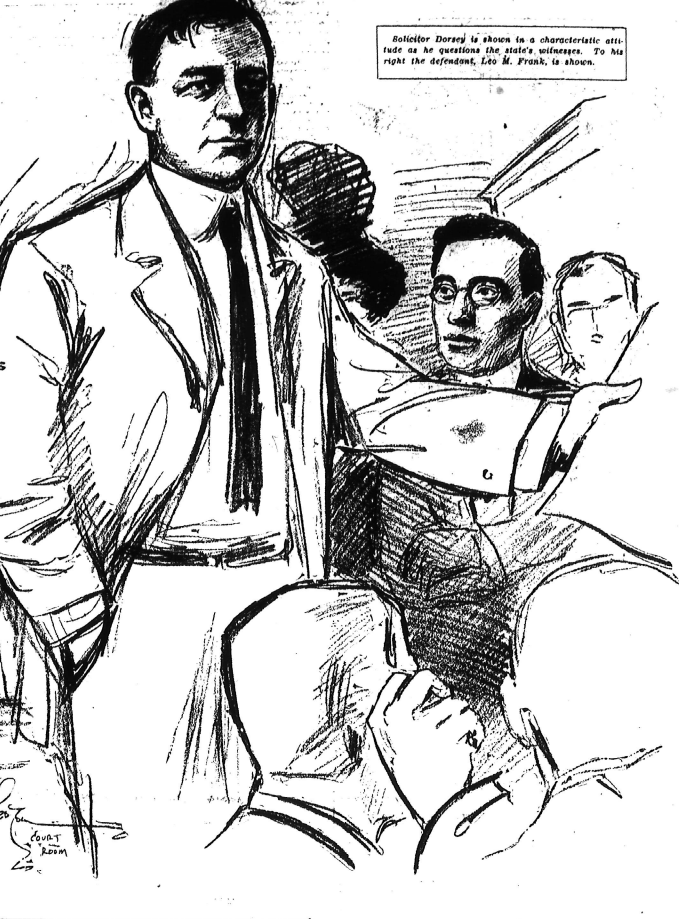

She had never seen a murder trial before and when the young lawyer took her into the courtroom where Leo M. Frank is on trial for his life, she was, of course, very excited.

It showed her the defendant, the two women beside him, the judge presiding over the case and the attorney for the defense, the witness standing on the stand and a grating cross-examination of the witness.

There were the two witnesses at the afternoon session—Detective Black and J. M. Gantt. The former slipping out of the stand to go to the witness stand, his testimony was so completely confused that he was unable to answer.

SOLICITOR DORSEY EXAMINING WITNESS AT FRANK TRIAL

Solicitor Dorsey is shown in a characteristic attitude as he questions the state's witnesses. To his right are the defendant, Leo M. Frank, and his attorney.
